Drying preparations simply developed by catarrh; they dry up the secretions, which adhere to the membrane and decompose, causing a far more serious trouble than the ordinary form of catarrh. Avoid all drying inhalants, fumes, smokes and snuffs and use that which cleanses, soothes and heals. Ely's Cream Balm is such a remedy and will cure catarrh or cold in the head easily and pleasantly. A trial size will be mailed for 10 cents. All druggists sell the 50c. size. Ely Brothers, 50 Warren St., N.Y.

The Balm cures without pain, does not irritate or cause sneezing. It spreads itself over an irritated and angry surface, relieving immediately the painful inflammation. With Ely's Cream Balm you are armed against Nasal Catarrh and Hay Fever.

THE OLD CHURCH BELLS.

Ring out merrily,
Lonely, cheerily,
Blithe old bells from the steeple tower;
Happily, fearfully,
Joyfully, fearfully,
Moreth the bride from the maiden tower,
Cloud there is none in the fair summer sky;
Sunshine sings benison down from on high;
Children sing loud as the rain moves along,
"Happy the bride the sun shines on."

Knell out drearily,
Measured and swarthy,
Sad old bells from the steeple gray;
Pious chanting lowly,
Solemnly, slowly,
Passeth the corpse from the portal today,
Drops from the leaden clouds heavily fall,
Dripping over the plume and the pall;
Murmur old folks as the train moves along,
"Happy the dead that the rain raineth on."

Toll at the hour of prime,
Matin and vesper chime,
Loving old bells from the steeple high;
Rolling like holy,
Over the lowly graves,
Floating up, prayer fraught, into the sky,
Solemn the season your lightest notes preach,
Stern is the preaching your iron tongues preach,
Ring in life from the land to the bloom,
Kinging the dead to their rest in the tomb.

Peal out evermore,
Peal as ye pealed Sabbath day,
Brave old bells, on each other's death,
In sunshine and gladness,
Through clouds and through sadness,
Bridal and burial have passed away,
Tell us life's pleasures with death are still rife;
Tell us that death ever leadeth to life,
Life is our labor, and death is our rest;
If happy the living, the dead are at rest.

MAROONING
A BOY...

By M. QUAD.

Copyright, 1901, by C. B. Lewis.

We were loading the Liverpool brig Nemo for London at Bombay and I had been shipped as second mate of her when one day a boy about 16 years of age came down to the craft and endeavored to slip as cabin boy, assistant to the cook or as an apprentice. He was an English lad who had run away from home and wanted to get back. He was frank spoken, had an honest, innocent face, and I was glad to help him to an interview with the captain. It did him no good, however. Captain Joyce was a selfish, hard hearted man, and he not only refused the lad the place he could easily have made for him, but cursed him roundly for having dared to come aboard. I felt sorry for the boy and slipped him a crown, and when he went over the side I advised him to try other vessels and not get discouraged.

I did not know that the boy returned and worked on the sympathies of some of our crew and was stowed away by them in the forehold, but that was what happened. Had I or any other officer of the ship got an inkling of his presence the stowaway would have been hauled out of his hiding place very quickly, but he was smuggled aboard so adroitly that only two or three sailors knew of his presence.

THERE WAS THE HULL OF THE SUNSHINE, once until we were three days at sea. Then by their advice he showed himself and offered to do anything he was set at to pay his way. Some shipmates would have put him to work and said no more about it, as he could have been made very useful, but Captain Joyce was pleased to look upon it as a heinous offense not to be overlooked. After abusing the lad for ten minutes by word of mouth he picked up a rope's end and flogged him till some of the men cried out against it. That stopped the flogging for the time being, but the lad was set at the dirtiest of work, given only food enough to keep soul and body together and was cursed at and struck whenever the captain could reach him. The first mate joined his superior in this, while I stood as neutral as I could. Had I openly sympathized with the lad I should have had a row with the captain, but I could and did show him decent treatment and encourage the men to do likewise.

We had run as far south as the Laccadive Islands and owing to a strong gale had been set in much nearer than our course lay when one day, as the brig was becalmed under the lee of one of the smaller islands, I was ordered to take a crew and row the boat ashore and leave him. I was at first for refusing point blank, as it was a monstrous thing to do, but I saw that the captain was in liquor and would have the affair carried out at any cost. Any refusal to obey orders would result in my being disgraced and clapped in irons. I staved more by going than by refusing. While the boat was being made ready I slipped down to my stateroom after matches, a knife, some fishbooks and other things and upon returning to the deck found that the captain had provided the lad with about ten pounds of hard bread, the same of pork and an old kettle. He refused him matches, however, and it was a lucky thing that I had brought three or four dozen along. The lad made no fuss about going, although he knew that he was to be set ashore on a lonely island. I know he was in deadly fear of the captain and mate and to escape them in any manner was a relief. On the way to shore I advised him as best I could, and the men at the oars were not backward in expressing their sympathy, and when we left Joey on the beach he was feeling quite stout hearted.

What happened to that lad after we sailed away reads like a romance. He had been marooned on one of the most easternmost of the group, and perhaps the island had never been explored by white men. It was three miles long by two broad, with a ridge running its length. Indeed, there were two ridges, and between them was a creek running to the north. At its mouth this creek widened into a little harbor. The boy had been the island for a week before he climbed the ridges and found them full of living springs which fed the creek. He followed the creek down to its mouth and there made the strangest of finds. Three years previously, while on a voyage from Bombay to Liverpool, the bark Sunshine had been dismasted at sea and deserted by her crew for a wreck. She was laden with wool, hides, dyewoods and minerals, and her cargo was appraised at nearly a million dollars. Her crew had been picked up at sea, the vessel listed as lost and the insurance paid, and yet as Joey reached the little harbor there was the hull of the Sunshine with her nose on the beach. Wind, wave and current had drifted her all of 700 miles and finally whirled her into that spot. Her hull was sound and her hatches on and her cargo had not been damaged to the amount of a hundred dollars.

Three weeks later the boy's signal smoke on the beach brought a vessel to his rescue, and he said not a word of his find till he reached Bombay and found men in whom he could trust. Then an expedition was fitted out, the hull and cargo were got to Bombay in safety, and the courts allowed the boy salvage enough to make him rich to the end of his days. In marooning a poor stowaway had whose only crime was wanting to return to his native land Captain Joyce had as good as thrown $300,000 at him and raised him up a thousand friends.

Why Albinoes Do Not See Well. According to Dr. A. D. Williams, the white, flaxen hair of albinos shows that there is a deficiency of coloring materials in their bodies. Further proof of this fact is found in the absence of the necessary amount of pigment in their eyes. Such persons have pink eyes because there is not pigment enough in the iris and upon its posterior surface to prevent the red reflex of the fundus from shining through the iris. Albinos are always greatly annoyed by strong light because there is not sufficient coloring to prevent the ingress of a flood of it, the bright glare entering not only through the pupil, but through the substance of the iris as well.

The choroid being likewise deficient in pigment, the excessive amount of light dazzles and greatly confuses the vision. Furthermore, the deficiency of pigments in the choroid prevents the light after it has acted on the retina from being absorbed, that being the main function of the choroid pigment. Albinism is an unfortunate condition, as there is no way to supply the deficient pigment to the iris and choroid.

A Lively Camp. In 1851 Mokelumne Hill was one of the worst camps in California. "Who was shot last week" was the first question asked by the miners when they came in from the river or surrounding diggings on Saturday nights or Sundays to gamble or get supplies. It was very seldom that the answer was, "No one."

Men would race up and down the thoroughfares in single file, as boys play the game of "follow my leader," each imitating the actions of the foremost. Selecting some particular leader in a sign they would fire in turn, regardless of everything but the accuracy of the aim. Then they would quarrel over it as though they were boys playing a game of marbles, while every shot was likely to kill or wound some unfortunate person.—Exchange.

Best Way to Take People.

One of the greatest lessons in life is to learn to take people at their best, not their worst; to look for the divine, not the human, in them; the beautiful, not the ugly; the bright, not the dark; the straight, not the crooked side. A habit of looking for the best in everybody and of saying kindly instead of unkindly things about them strengthens the character, elevates the ideals and tends to produce happiness. It also helps to create friends. We like to be with those who see the divine side of us, who see our possibilities, who do not dwell upon the dark side of our life, but upon the bright side. This is the office of a true friend, to help us discover our noblest selves.—Success.

It Looked Intriguing.

I was visiting a magistrate in Kerry county when a stalwart fellow was brought in a prisoner, charged with nearly killing an old baldheaded man, whose head was a bloody mass. "What was it this fellow did to you?" asked the magistrate. "Nothing." "Then what made you do it?" "Well, I'll tell you honor God's truth. Ye see, I came late into the fair, luck was ag'in me, for all the fighting was over, so as I was strutting about looking for some boy to cross a stick wid I saw this poor man's bald head poked out of a slit of the tent that he might cool it, and it looked so inviting that for the soul of me I couldn't help hitting the blow."—S. C. Hall's Diary.

An Impartial Woman.

"This is the grave of the most impartial woman on record," said the guide in Caye Hill cemetery to a party who visited the beautiful cemetery the other day. "Away over that second knoll there is a lot containing only two graves, and the headstone of each is marked 'Father.'"

"The woman who is buried here was married twice, and the two graves in that lot are the graves of her two husbands. She tried her best to treat her second husband as she did the first, and even when he died she had no idea of showing any preference. But she was sick when the funeral service of her second husband was held. She directed that the partner of her second matrimonial venture be laid by the side of the first, but that enough space be left to bury her between the two."

"By some hook or crook a mistake was made, and when she visited the cemetery she found that they were buried side by side, with no space between. 'Well, sir, she didn't know what to do. She argued that if she should be buried by the side of her first husband it would not be fair to the memory of her last spouse, and vice versa. What did she do? Why, when she died she left a request that she be buried in another lot, away from both of them, and it was heeded.'—Louisville Courier Journal.

Translators' Stumbling Blocks. Some amusing instances of translators' misunderstandings are mentioned by the London Daily News. An Italian paper not long ago turned Mr. Rudyard Kipling's "Absentminded Beggar" into a "Distracted Mendicant." A footnote to the same version explained "son of a Lambeth publican" as a reference to Mr. Kruger. The translator who explains is often lost.

Another Italian editor who translated a passage from an English paper about a man who had killed his wife with a poker added an ingenious footnote to say, "We do not know with certainty whether this thing 'poker' be a domestic or surgical instrument."

In the French version of one of Scott's novels a Welsh rabbit has to be dealt with. The translator, never having met with that article of food, naturally turned it into "un lapin de Galles." Unfortunately he had some doubt whether or his countrymen would understand this and added a lengthy footnote describing how the peculiarly delicious flavor of the rabbits of Wales created a large demand for them in Scotland, whither they were exported in bulk that would compare with the trade of Ostend.

Japan's Impregnability. The coast of Japan, notwithstanding its long shore line and numerous harbors, offers scanty allurement to an invading army. There is very little beach. The bold crags and bluffs overlooking every spot where a modern war vessel can ride at anchor are protected by strong fortifications defended by the most modern guns.

Yeddo bay, the most feasible bight for invading purposes, needs careful navigation even by steamers of moderate draft. When torpedoes are planted, it is simply impregnable, says a writer in Collier's Weekly. When the war with China broke out, a small steamer was selected to pilot merchant steamers up and down the bay. I remember perfectly the unexpected curves made by this steamer, showing plainly the countless dangers besetting a hostile fleet regardless of the care that may be used in feeling its way. No invading army could possibly land, and even if it succeeded in doing so, the rice fields, readily submerged as they are, would aid materially in thwarting the advance and in isolating the enemy. A successful invasion of Japan is simply impossible.

An Irish Retort.

Pat, the driver of the coal wagon, seemed puzzled when he got up on high street the other day. He looked at the numbers of several houses and scratched his head in a perplexed way. Finally Mrs. Eaton, for whom the coal was intended, appeared and inquired: "Beg pardon, but is that coal for Eaton?"

"No, mom," responded Pat promptly; "it's not for 'atin; it's for burnin'!"—London Telegraph.

Until She Spoke.

She was such a stylish, aristocratic looking girl that she won admiring glances from the whole car. "We Americans," I mused, "do not need empty titles to make our folk of gentle blood."

Her friend handed her some photographs. She examined them critically.

"Them's bully!" she exclaimed.—Boston Record.

"So Long."

I first became familiar with this val edition at Malta in the seventies. It was then in common use among the Maltese of Valetta, but was by them pronounced "sah-lahng." I at that time took it to be a local form of the Arabic "salaam," and my surprise was great when on returning to England in the eighties I found the phrase prevalent in London.—Notes and Queries.

Attorney Rodgers, claims that the county must pay these costs, and we guess he knows what he is talking about.

Weekly Crop Bulletin.

United States Department of Agriculture. Climate and Crop Bulletin of the Weather Bureau, California Section, Coast and Bay Division, for the week ending Monday, June 17th, 1901.

Continued cool weather has been unfavorable for maturing the grain and fruit crops. Heavy frosts have occurred in some of the southern coast counties, causing slight damage to corn, potatoes and other summer crops, but there are no reports of injury to fruit. Grain harvest and haying are in progress, and good crops are being gathered; grain is reported plump and heavy. Prunes are said to be dropping badly in portions of San Benito county. Other deciduous fruits are doing well, but the yield will be light in most places. Grapes are thrifty. Sugar beets, hops and garden vegetables are in good condition. Tomato vines are making good growth; there is a large acreage in Sonoma county.

THE OBSERVER.

When Chicago professors comment on bangs, And cause many youths to suffer heart pangs. When 'tis said he is brainless who parts his hair in the middle, And has no more sense than an old Chinese fiddle, It's time for the bald-heads to get out and shout That they're glad every darn hair in their heads has fallen out. For if hair they did have, vanity might tempt them, To adopt the coiffure from which baldness exempts them.

A real Prince and Princess came out to the West. They are none others than the Hatzfelds. Princess Hatzfeld was formerly Clara Huntington and for a crown her father Collis P. gave more than a million. Now it is said that she wants more money out of the estate. Titled husbands are expensive luxuries, but so long as American girls' papas think so much of "ze grand old family," the noble scion will undoubtedly condescend to accept that magic conscience healer—that retriever of lost fortunes—the American Almighty dollar.

It is scarcely wise for an observer who is not strictly a book reviewer to pronounce judgment on a literary work and to lead the reading public into his way of thinking. All that "The Observer" can do is to put the reading public on the right track—make suggestions as to the lines they should follow and point out literary touchstones. Prose is more readily grasped than poetry and while contemporary poetry is but being interpreted in the sanctums of the few, the current novel is being talked about from pole to pole.

If you have been entering into this universal discussion, change your literary diet for the summer season and try and digest some of Fitzgerald's "Rubaiyat" of Omar Khayyam, Tennyson's "In Memoriam"; or, (if I dare recommend it) Thomson's "City of Dreadful Night." Read these for literary and philosophic antithesis. The "Rubaiyat" is philosophical essence. It is that philosophy of life which says:

"Ah, fill the cup—what boots it to repeat,
How Time is slipping underneath our feet.
Unborn to-morrow and dead yesterday,
Why fret about them if to-day be sweet?"

It is the epicurean doctrine of "carpe diem." It is a hedonism which believes happiness to consist of perfect tranquility of mind. Tennyson's "In Memoriam," written on the death of his beloved friend Arthur Hallam, needs no recommendation or introduction. Read it again and compare it with the Rubaiyat. Thomson's "City of Dreadful Night," is startling. It is bold and warranted to make the coolest calculator dream bad dreams—to make the most deep-seated heart knock on the ribs. It is blasphemous—awful pessimism guaranteed to shock and leave a bad taste in your mouth. Prepare yourself for the worst and you may glean some ideas of whether this pessimism of which you have heard so much leads.

Sybil Sanderson, our beautiful American singer, who has scored innumerable triumphs abroad, recently received a handsome bouquet of roses over the footlights, but was horrified on examining it later to find that it concealed a murderous looking dagger. The fair Sybil was mystified and the press puzzled as to its significance. The solution seems easy. Perhaps the prima donna's song failed to tickle the ear of some facetious critic, who chose the dagger as a polite way of saying "cut it out."

Some of our big dailies are veritable matrimonial advertising mediums. A society wedding scheduled for the month of June is announced in April and boomed with elaborate notices and squibs up to the very day the knot is tied.

Are space writers trying to add to their weekly incomes and provoke old maids, or is mamma trying to hold down the prospective son-in-law?

A unique opera company was recently consigned to Washington. In a package sent from North Carolina, was a wooden box covered with gauze and marked "400 mosquitoes." They were lyric wonders, had exquisite voices and filled the air with their melodious song from one end of the journey to the other.

Then "Mosquitoes on Parade" was in order.

HAIR

So many persons have hair that is stubborn and dull. It won't grow. What's the reason? Hair needs help just as anything else does at times. The roots require feeding. When hair stops growing it loses its luster. It looks dead.

AYER'S Hair Vigor
acts almost instantly on such hair. It awakens new life in the hair bulbs. The effect is astonishing. Your hair grows, becomes thicker, and all dandruff is removed. And the original color of early life is restored to faded or gray hair. This is always the case.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor, and am really astonished at the good it has done in keeping my hair from coming out. It is the best tonic I have tried, and I shall continue to recommend it to my friends."
MATTIE HOLT,
Sept. 24, 1896. Burlington, N. C.
If you do not obtain all the benefits you expect from the use of the Hair Vigor, write the doctor about it.

Eddie Von Geldern, Paul Sims, and Herbert and Melville Erskine, pupils of the Locust Grove School, were the guests of Peter Hein Thursday. One of the boys jumped into one of Mr. Hein's rowboats and rowed up the Sonoma creek quite a distance. The tide was with him going and rowing was easy, but when he essayed to return he could make no headway whatever against both wind and tide and was rapidly becoming exhausted. His predicament was discovered through a pair of field glasses and Melville Erskine went to the smaller lad's rescue in another boat and brought him safely back to the drawbridge. The youngster was badly frightened, and he says rowing a boat with the tide is all right but it is quite another thing when the water is running the other way.

Rhinefarm is a veritable menagerie in so far as furnishing interesting snake and wild animal stories for this week's issue is concerned. In another column we tell of the capture of a couple of foxes on the place and now it furnishes the snake editor with some stuff. On Friday of last week the Chinese cook on the farm while reclining on his bed for an afternoon's snooze was awakened by a strange sound which came from beneath his bed. He arose and was in the act of jumping up to investigate the cause of the peculiar noise when he espied a huge rattlesnake on the floor. It had crawled out from underneath the bed and was coiled up and ready to strike him, which it surely would have done had his feet touched the floor. Avoiding the rattler and securing a stout club the Chinese dispatched him in short order with a rap on the head. The snake was over four feet in length, as big around as a man's wrist and sported eight rattles and a button.

Tom Hopper's Wife Sues for a Divorce.

Would Become a Grass (Hopper) Widow—Sequel to an Ill-Advised Marriage.

There are widows and there are grass widows, but who ever heard of a woman appealing to the courts to be made a grass-Hopper widow, as it were?

Thos. Hopper of Santa Rosa is one of Sonoma county's most wealthy citizens, or at least he was previous to deeding all his property—estimated at a cool half million—to his children and grandchildren about a year ago.

Tom Hopper is a pioneer resident of Sonoma county. He came here in the early fifties, in those good old times when he and Dan Davison, the insurance man of Santa Rosa, drove bull teams together in the Sonoma Valley. He was thrifty and his first wife, who died a number of years ago, was saving and frugal, too. Together they worked and saved, and it is said of the first Mrs. Hopper that she denied herself all the luxuries and even many of the necessities of this life. However that may be, when she died Tom Hopper was accounted by the ladies a rich widower and a great "catch." But try as they may the scheming-lasies and buxom widows of Santa Rosa who had set their caps to win old Tom Hopper's heart, and there were many of them, failed to land the prize.

One fine day, however, Lulu, otherwise known as Mrs. Tom Hopper No. 2, appeared upon the scene, she came from the East somewhere, put up at mine host Morsehead's Hotel, the Grand, and immediately proceeded to lay siege to old Tom's heart. The result was a short courtship, a hasty marriage, fine horses and carriages, footmen in livery, a magnificent house and furnishings and receptions galore. The way she made Tom Hopper's money fly was a caution and the style that followed her advent paralyzed the natives of Santa Rosa. It is even said that Tom appeared in a claw hammer and the other torgery that goes with a "full dress" on the occasion of Mrs. Lulu's swell receptions. Finally the old man commenced to realize that things were not what they appeared to be. Mrs. Hopper No. 2 seemed to have centered all her affections on the money and not the man and was rapidly squandering his fortune. It was then that old Tom Hopper pulled himself together and showed the stern stuff he was made of. One fine day, while his wife was enjoying herself in the Los Angeles establishment which he had set up for her, he deeded his entire fortune to his Santa Rosa relatives and turned his extravagant spouse down.

There was blood on the moon when Mrs. Lulu found that the old man had circumvented her, but finding that he could not be won back by threats she resorted to her old-time tactics and made her obstreperous spouse actually believe that he was her only and true baby. Then there was a reconciliation and Mrs. Hopper No. 2 was again installed into the affections of her hubby, but still banked after those dollars which brought so much bliss to her. But the old man's wealth had fled, and the Hoppers, big and little, who had acquired all his wealth by deed, refused to disgorge, and the madam again got on her high horse and "hopped" back to her Los Angeles establishment.

Now comes the sequel to this interesting tale. On Monday last Mrs. Hopper, through her attorneys State Senator Sims and Garber, Cresswell & Garber, instituted proceedings for divorce in the Superior Court of this county. She charges extreme cruelty in her complaint which is of a very sensational nature.

Mrs. Hopper also very modestly asks the court to award her $600 a month alimony, $500 expenses and $5,000 attorneys fees. She also demands that the court declare null and void and set aside the deeds to valuable property executed by Mr. Hopper to his children and grandchildren, which deeds cover his entire wealth, for Tom Hopper is now a penniless man depending upon the bounty of his children.

Foxes Trapped on Rhinefarm.

Some months ago a small family of gray foxes took up their abode on Rhinefarm, two miles east of town. Their presence soon became known to the employees on the ranch and a trap was set to catch them, with the result that two of the sly animals were captured, one of them, a baby fox, being trapped on Friday of last week. The latter was taken to San Francisco by Henry Gundlach Monday and is now on exhibition in the Gundlach-Bundschu wine cellars, corner Second and Market streets. So far the mother fox has evaded all attempts to capture her and she is still a menace to suburban hen-roosts.

The Teeth Were False Ones

A busload of guests from the Lawrence Villa were unceremoniously spilled out into the middle of the road near the California Springs Hotel on Monday last by the over turning of the bus. One of the ladies had her front teeth knocked out, but they were false ones, another received a black eye, (which, however, was not a glass one), and all were more or less bruised and shaken up. The cause of the upset was a wheel coming off the axle.

At Pretty "La Lomita" the Allens Receive.

The Allens entertained at their handsome country home, "La Lomita," on Thursday evening, in honor of the Misses Anna and Lizzie Cady of Boston.

"La Lomita" is beautifully situated on a picturesque knoll in the northwestern portion of the valley. It overlooks acres of vineyard and miles of exquisite rustic landscape and is indeed in every way an ideal place.

Just at twilight the guests began to arrive and soon a thoroughly congenial company was assembled and welcomed by the genial host and hostess Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Allen, Mrs. Sheldon, Mrs. Allen's mother, and Mrs. Hubbard of Rhode Island.

The evening was perfect and the mountain air so fragrant without that the enthusiastic guests scarcely could be persuaded to leave nature's beauties behind even for the warmth and cheer of the drawing-room. Darkening shadows, however, crept over the scene without and then the indoor festivities began.

The house had been decorated with the fairest of foliage and flowers, no small part of which was the exquisite carnations grown on the Allen place itself.

The evening was devoted to music, dancing, refreshments and social converse and the hours quickly waned under the splendid hospitality accorded by all the members of the Allen household.

The invited guests were: Mrs. S. Enos, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Miller, Miss Hall of Oakland, Mr. and Mrs. Knight, Miss Bessie Knight, Mr. and Mrs. Granice, the Misses Granice, Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Duhring, Miss Clewe, Messrs. F. and W. Clewe, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Sonoma Valley Crowded With Visitors.

The valley is alive with summer folks. Every train brings large crowds to fill the large hotels, pretty summer resorts and camps in this vicinity.

The Bellevue and Villa are overrun with guests. Pellissier's (Lawrence Villa), is prettily situated and is drawing a great run of custom.

The town hotels are doing well and are preparing to cater to still larger crowds. The Union Hotel has been thoroughly renovated and under the new management is an excellent hostelry. The Toscano Hotel, the Garibaldi House and City Hotel specialize on good living and for savory Italian and French dinners are hard to beat.

Boyes' Hot Springs is accommodating hundreds of bathers every week. The California Hot Springs is crowded and the genial hosts, Messrs. Cooper and Shelden, are daily receiving from forty to fifty applications for accommodations.

Dr. O'Donnell's cottages and picturesque park will be occupied throughout the entire season by several hundred pleasure seekers. The Mervyn, Wegner Villa and Redwood Farm are, as always, among the most popular places of the State and they will do a big business this year.

Many of the smaller resorts throughout the valley are so charming in every respect that they are unable to accommodate half of the many guests sent to them.

The summer trade is going to make the season lively for us, thanks to the railroad people, who are advertising so well the natural beauties and attractions of this valley.
